Rattan furniture

Rattan is a solid natural material with great strength. Rattan has a natural resistance to heat, cold, moisture and temperature fluctuations, making it a versatile material that can be used in a variety of climates and environments. These properties make rattan a popular choice for those who want durable furniture with a natural look.

Rattan furniture is best suited for indoor use but in warm and dry climates it can also be used for covered outdoor areas such as verandas, conservatories and covered terraces, but should not be exposed to rain or humid environments such as pool areas, as water and moisture will shorten the life of the furniture.

If you take good care of your rattan furniture, it is capable of lasting for generations. To extend the life of our furniture, we have repair videos available that allow our customers to carry out simple repairs themselves, such as a loose binding. As rattan is a solid material, rattan furniture is virtually impossible to wear out. We therefore hope that these cosmetic repairs can prolong the enjoyment of our furniture and delay the need for replacement. The repair videos are available on our website.

Cleaning of surfaces

One of the great advantages of rattan is that it requires minimal maintenance. The material is naturally dirt-repellent and retains its strength and beauty for many years without the need for special treatment.

For daily cleaning, you can wipe the furniture with a hard wrung cloth to remove dust and dirt. It is recommended to avoid excessive use of water, as the material can absorb it, which will weaken the fibers over time. You can also vacuum the furniture with a soft brush to remove dust from the woven details.
